The Istrian Peninsula is the largest Croatian peninsula and is one of the best-developed tourist regions on the Mediterranean. Referred to as the new Tuscany, it certainly has that feel about it - lush countryside and fairytale, hill top towns like Motovun...wine tasting, truffle forests and olive oil are staples of this area. However, it has remained largely untouched, and offers real variety to visitors - you can stay in a villa in the countryside of Istria, yet be close to sea side towns like Rovinj, Porec, Opatija and Pula. Steeped in history and with plenty of sightseeing opportunities, these are lovely towns to wander around with their cobbled, winding streets. And, of course you can swim in the clear Adriatic at any point. It's beautiful and there's nowhere else really like it...
